The New RTA Claims Regime

This is an essential briefing for anyone involved in RTA claims work.

The new RTA claims process promises a dramatic impact on all personal injury practitioners involved in road traffic litigation in the County Court – regardless of whether they are instructed by claimants or insurers. The threat of seeing fee income streams fundamentally changed very soon – probably by the end of this Summer – means that having up-to-the-minute guidance on how to run cases moving forward is critical. At the same time, more and more practitioners are having to defend and pursue allegations of fraud and low velocity impact in these same claims.

This briefing is designed to help practitioners understand the changes and plans for the future. John Ratledge will provide expert guidance and discuss the new Ministry of Justice proposals for lower value personal injury road traffic claims and highlight the relevant parts of the broad-ranging costs revolution proposed by the Jackson Review. He will then go on to consider the key features of litigating potentially fraudulent claims and put this in the context of recent developments in this area.

Speaker

John Ratledge

Barrister, St Johns Buildings

For 10 years John has specialised in personal injury litigation. The main area of concentration during that period was road traffic work and latterly a particular focus on all facets of fraudulent claims (eg staged accidents, deliberate slam-ons, bogus passengers and LVI) for both Claimants and Defendants. Other more general personal injury work covers higher level brain and spinal injury work, as well as low value 'disposal' work.
